As To Binder Twine

During the debate in the House of Commons on Friday, July 21st, on the resolutions of the Minister of Finance to give a bounty of three-eighths of a cent a pound on manilla hemp imported for the manufacture of binder twine, Mr. Oliver spoke as follows:—

Mr. OLIVER. In view of the long discussion on this subject and the nature of that discussion, I would respectfully suggest to the Minister of Finance that he withdraw the resolution. It appears that this resolution which is intended to give certain relief to the binder twine manufacturing industry is not satisfactory to the friends of that industry who have taken a great deal of trouble to show that it is not sufficiently far-reaching. But being the case, and speaking on behalf of those who use binder twine I can say that they are not asking for any such resolution. But the discussion has done good in that our friends opposite have taken a very definite stand upon the subject not only of the duties on binder twine, but on duties generally, and when the next election rolls around we, in the Northwest Territories, cannot be attacked by election candidates because the government is too protective.

I am no sympathizer with the idea which has been put forward repeatedly by the opposition, that the remedy for all possible industrial and commercial evils is the raising of the tariff. It does not make any difference what the industry is; it does not make any difference what the condition is, the remedy proposed in all cases by hon. members opposite is to raise the tariff. If it is possible to protect every industry and if every industry is protected, it all comes around that no industry is protected for all are on the same level. If there is protection somebody must have an advantage and somebody must be at a disadvantage. Protection means unfairness; it means special advantage to some; and unless there is that special advantage there is no protection.

In regard to this binder twine industry I take for granted that the government in framing the tariff came to the conclusion that some industries had to be sacrificed that some had to get along with lower duties than others. They figured no doubt that the great necessity of the country should come in under a low tariff, or free while the luxuries should pay the greater part of the revenue. On that principle, and considering that binder twine is a vital necessity to the greatest producing industry of the whole country; is an ever recurring necessity and had been up to that time under the operation of a notorious combine; the government placed binder twine on the free list. Taking into consideration the fact that the material entering into the manufacture of binder twine was entirely imported; taking into consideration the fact that there was a minimum amount of labor and capital entering into the manufacture of binder twine and a maximum amount of imported material, it seemed reasonable that that industry which had been the subject of the profitable operations of a combine for so many years, should be brought down to the level of no duty. The abolition of the duty was a material advantage to the farmers of the country and I am surprised that the opposition, and some hon. gentlemen on this side of the House, should take a stand in favor of the reimposition of a duty which, from the standpoint of the farmers, is an unjustifiable tax on their industry, a tax which is not supported by any of the reasons which can be advanced on behalf of some other industries.

As my hon. friend from Westworth said, the farmer is no pauper, he is prepared to pay his share of the taxation of the country; and give our hon. friends of the opposition a chance, and they will see to it that he pays, not only his fair share, but a great deal more. There are many articles of consumption required by the farmers on which the duty is higher than a purely revenue basis. Probably the duty should be kept moderately high in the interest of industries in which there is a large investment of capital and a large employment of labor, especially those in which native capital, native labor, and native material are the whole consideration. These industries certainly are entitled to all the benefit which a revenue tariff can give them. The farmers, who are willing to submit to duties of this character, under these circumstances, are entitled to compensation of some sort; and it was thought well by the government, in framing their tariff, to give them compensation in free binder twine, free barbed wire, free cream separators, and for the special advantage of eastern Canada, free corn. The farmers have been given these advantages, which have been valuable to them, and our friends on the other side of the House have today determinedly demanded that they be taken from them.

As to the charge that the reduction of the duty has increased the price of binder twine, I do not suppose that anybody holds that opinion seriously, but I know that it was proclaimed on every platform occupied by Conservative orators throughout the Northwest in the late general elections. We have had it on the authority of the opposition today that the reason for the increased price of binder twine was the war in the Philippines. Because of the advance in the price of raw manilla caused by that war, the binder twine factories were able to pay a dividend in one year of 100 per cent, and in another year of 40 per cent. I am told that in two years they paid 20 per cent; and the lowest they have paid since 1896 has been 10 per cent. I would like to know what these binder twine companies want. They have made more profits, from one reason or another, in spite of, if not because of, the removal of the duty than possibly any other manufacturing industry in this country. Surely this is an industry which, in the first place, it is an advantage to the farmer should not be protected; and, in the next place, which may very well live and thrive without protection.

If the question is ruled as to the principle or the theoretical right of giving this country that question is very easily answered. There are certain conditions existing beyond the authority of this country which produce a certain set of conditions in this country; and it is no contravention of free trade, or of any other reasonable doctrine of government, that action may fairly and properly be taken in this country by any means possible to meet those conditions. It is the business of this government, or of any government, to see that the various industries of the country are not placed at an undue disadvantage because of the action of other countries so far as that is reasonably practical. But, for my part, I say that if they had not seen fit to do so, and, if, because of that, the binder twine industry went to pieces altogether, it would still be better for the country at large that we should be able to import our binder twine free of duty than that this country should be taxed by a duty that would raise the price of binder twine to the consumer, for the profit either of the United States combine or the Canadian combine.

Mr. HEYD. Where does the hon. gentleman get his authority for speaking of a Canadian combine?

Mr. OLIVER. I am given to understand that the great reason for the reduction of the duty to 12 1/2 per cent, in 1894 was that it was understood that a Canadian combine existed.

Mr. HEYD. Does the hon. member believe there is one yet?

Mr. OLIVER. From what the hon. member for St. Mary's said today, that the American combine came into this country and dictated terms to our manufacturers, under which terms our manufacturers restricted their output, and paid their shareholders dividends ranging from 10 per cent to 100 per cent, we are entitled to say that the binder twine industry is a combine which is a part of the American combine; and I do not see how that condition would be improved to the consumer by the imposition of a duty, which would simply enable the members of the Canadian combine to take that much more out of the Canadian consumer. The idea underlying the demand for increased duty on binder twine and increased duties generally is practically this—that the farmers are prosperous and can stand it. But the farmers could not stand it from 1878 to 1896, and they cannot stand it now. The question is not whether they are willing to stand it or no. The fact is they cannot stand it. When the great agricultural industry upon which the whole prosperity of the country depends is placed at a disadvantage, the minor industries are injured as well, including that of manufacturing.

Canada experienced bad times from 1883 to 1896. The so-called national policy was in force and the Conservative government was in office. It was within their power, if they had the will, to place duties on any article at any rate they pleased. If they did not exercise that power and improve the times, it could only be because they did not believe what they say now, or else that what they say now is not true. If there have been no substantial changes in the tariff since 1896 why are our friends opposite complaining against the present tariff? Either they are complaining because there have been substantial reductions, or, if there have been no such reductions, they are not satisfied with a protective and demand a prohibitive tariff. They are welcome to either position, but after this debate must not expect to take both.

VEGREVILLE

D. Thornton, son-in-law of the late Mr. G. B. Rush and dentist of Dresden, Ontario who has been visiting at the doctor's, returned to Edmonton this week on his return journey homeward.

Mr. Wm. McDonald, of Stony Plain, made an extraordinary trip from Edmonton to Birch Lake recently. He had a yoke of oxen in a cart loaded with several hundred weight of freight and although the roads and mosquitoes were exceedingly difficult to do battle with, yet he made the journey in good time as he left Edmonton on Monday at 6 p.m. and arrived at his homestead near Birch Lake on the following Saturday evening, and thus travelled a distance of 125 muddy miles. Billy says he slew mosquitoes by the million and in describing the mud holes he said that scores of times he could see nothing (t) but his own stein and the horns of the oxen above the surface.

Mr. Brakenridge, of Josephsburg, Mr. Weir and another friend drove out to the northern part of the Birch Lake country last week, but did not find land suitable to their desires. Many land seekers come here and some few of them go back home and give our country a rather unfriendly description, sometimes caused by a rainy day, discouragements. Settlers are daily pouring in and going further than those who preceded them and the good grazing lands are said to be farther on still.

The rains of Sunday and Monday, July 26th and 27th, have swollen our creeks to almost last spring's high water mark. Vegetables and grain crops are leaping ahead, but sloughs are much retarded because of the superabundant supply of that bilmy liquid, "older than Adam, yet younger than the morning dew." Highland hayne has commenced in a few places.

Mr. Pringle, a settler near Vegreville, had a horse killed by running against a newly erected barbed wire fence. Another one of his horses is also so badly injured that hope of its recovery is exceedingly slight.

Rev. W. A. Rae, formerly Presbyterian minister here, has returned after a visit of five or six months among friends in Manitoba and Ontario. He purposes settling on his homestead, eighteen miles east of the village.

Mr. Smith, of New Hamburg, Ont., and Mr. Armstrong, of British Columbia, have been making a very thorough investigation of the farming and grazing characteristics of the lands bordering the western boundary of the Harry colony estate. Mr. Smith, we believe, is well satisfied with what he saw and we hope to see him in the near future with "herd" of the near future ranchers. Mr. Smith is a brother of Dr. H. R. Smith, late of St. As, Alta.

The postponed Spring Creek picnic became an event last week. Everyone reports a big crowd, exciting and skillful games, exhibiting beating, snuff races and a general row. All the to the picnic enjoyed an abundance of very fine weather and abundant food, and a general row.

STONY PLAIN

Owing to the gloomy weather and the steady downpour of rain, the backsliders who have been looking for good roads, have been unfortunate enough to get the pink eye.

Crops in this vicinity look very well considering the unfavorable weather.

Mr. H. Schwartz had the misfortune to sustain painful injuries on Friday last by the upsetting of a wagon on which he was riding.

Mr. J. H. Buckman is visiting friends here.

Mr. Jacob Miller has his new house nearly completed.

Mr. P. W. Abbott is spending his vacation with friends here.

Mr. I. Kieven has been very fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Moody Washburn and Jacob Miller for the summer.

The Stony Plain Centre school has reopened under the very able services of Miss Livingston.

Property on Stony Plain is increasing in value and the many sales indicate the great demand for land in these parts.

BASEBALL

A first-class game of baseball was played on the old race track last evening, resulting in the defeat of the Victoria camp boys by the Purchases boarding house aggregation by a score of 13 to 8. The game was very interesting from start to finish and the best of good feeling prevailed. The boys from the river need not be ashamed of the showing they made when it is considered that among their opponents were Till, Hamilton, Gilmore, Birk, etc., etc. of the first team. As the game was late in starting only four innings could be played. The Victoria Camp battery did good work, but the boarding house team are good players, know the game thoroughly and go in to win. Gilmore pitched the first two innings for the boarders and Till the last two. The teams were as follows:—

Purchases	Boarding house
Butler	Pitcher
Butler	Catcher
Schuld	Shortstop
Soule	First Base
Forayth	Second Base
Greenwood	Third Base
Olds	Left Field
Fleming	Centre Field
Nesbitt	Right Field
Hoar	Manager

The Grand Trunk Pacific Route

Ottawa, Ont., August 5.—The Grand Trunk has heard very satisfactory reports from its engineers as to the harbor at Fort Simpson. It is proposed to build a new harbor there, San Francisco and offers a splendid anchorage for shipping. The Peace River pass will be the one by which the new transcontinental line will cross the Rocky mountains. The highest grade does not exceed one and a half per cent, and the average grade is one per cent. Coal deposits abound in the locality, and there is said to be fine gold in the Peace river. It is likely that plans of the section from Winnipeg to Edmonton will be filed with the government as that is the easiest of construction. The people of Quebec are well pleased with the prospect of opening up to colonization the northern part of their province. The soil is reported to be even better and more fertile than was at first supposed. The Roman Catholic hierarchy have in their possession reports of missionaries which refer to portions of Northern Quebec in the most glowing terms.

CALMAR

Bad roads.
Lots of rain and sunshine.
Crops are doing well.
A basket picnic was held here the 22nd day of July with a large attendance, about two hundred persons being present. Speeches and sports of all kinds were furnished. Coffee and lemonade were served free of charge on the grounds.
Charley Dalquist, from Wheaton, Minn., paid a visit to his parents here, Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Dalquist, last week. Charley got a good position down there and is climbing up the stairs.
The Swedish Lutherans of Calmar are going to build a church in the near future.
Considerable breaking has been done this year in our settlement. The willows are suffering from it.
The Calmar Threshing and Milling company are buying a sawmill for next year, also a planing mill.
The buying will be late this year on account of the slow weather lately.
The government is to construct two or three bridges in our settlement this summer. This is the promise.
Mr. E. T. Beckell has got the first bunch of cattle west of Leduc.
If you want a loan on your place, see the postmaster at Calmar; or, if you wish to become a citizen or get a permit for cutting hay and timber call on him. Charges reasonable.
What is the matter with our government giving $500,000 bonus each year to the best industry? I think it would have been more satisfactory to lay that half million dollars out on our roads in the Northwest.
If the government build the Intercolonial railroad and then give it to the Grand Trunk people, what is the difference. Why not build it and run it too?
Calmar, July 28, 1903.
